It was considered a sign of national strength to be tough on crime. So why do we have so many prisoners? The U.S. prison system is the most expensive in the world. In fact, it's the most expensive per prisoner. In 2002, the U.S. spent more than twice as much on incarceration as the second-place U.K. Part of it has to do with the crime wave that started in the early 1990s. According to the Federal Bureau of Prisons, crime peaked in 1992, with the year-to-year increase the highest in 80 years. Since then, violent crime has fallen. So why does America have so many more prisoners? And how did they get to be so much more expensive? THE CRIME DROP In the early 1990s, there was a big crime wave in the United States. Between 1991 and 1994, violent crime increased by an astounding 27 percent and rape by 26 percent. At the same time, the number of federal prisoners peaked. And for the next few years, the rate of growth in the federal prison population was double that of the overall prison population. What happened to all those young men? Many committed the crimes. Others were locked up for the rest of their lives. THE ELDERLY PRISONERS In 1995, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that life-sentenced prisoners are no longer eligible for parole. By now, there are nearly 20,000 elderly prisoners in federal prisons. These are inmates over the age of 60 who have already served at least 30 years in prison. Since many have already spent close to a half century in prison, many of them are in poor health. The growth of this population is in 82157476af
